Keynote Address

CATERPILLAR TO BUTTERFLY - THE STRUGGLE TO TRANSFORM

Andre Boykin

How rich would you be if you had a nickel for every new thought or idea that you had? How often have you started to take action on new ideas and the discomforts and chaos of trying something new caused you to go back to the same old, same old? ...or you opted for “okay” and “comfortable” versus embracing the opportunity of the extraordinary ...and, you lost the opportunity to achieve something you never achieved before. This keynote reveals the secret of how you can break through the struggles that keep you from pursuing your aspirations. Hear how you can trek into the “land of discovery,” be confident to navigate the unknown, work through rough terrain, and come out victorious. You will leave this keynote empowered to embark on a new path to cause your own transformation for greater results and effectiveness.

Get ideas to redesign/update currently existing spaces for more function. This could include updating outdoor spaces, adding tavern space for socializing, or adding elements that create a more homelike atmosphere. What adaptive features are available to create a less “institutional” environment (such as handrails that appear more home-like)? What are the trends and technological advances being seen in building design. What features could make the space more “user-friendly” for everyone?
